Kosciusko Stamps Honor War General

Local stamp collectors are advised that the post office department has added Pittsburgh, Pa., to the list of post offices which are authorized to participate in the first-day sale of the Kosciusko commemorative postage stamps on October 13.

The complete list of post offices authorized to participate in the first-day sale of the Kosciusko stamps is as follows: Chicago, Ill.; Boston, Mass.; Detroit, Mich.; Kosciusko, Minn.; St. Louis, Mo.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Kosciusko stamp will be in the 5-cent denomination, based in honor of Gen. Thaddeus Kosciusko, in recognition of his services to the American cause during the Revolutionary War. The stamp is being issued in connection with the 150th anniversary of the naturalization of Gen. Kosciusko as an American citizen. The stamp will bear his likeness, modeled from a statue in Lafayette Park, Washington, D. C.

For the benefit of stamp collectors, the Kosciusko commemorative stamp will be placed on sale at the Philatelic Agency, Post Office Department, Washington, D. C., on October 14. However, neither the agency nor the Washington post office will prepare covers for mailing on that date. ### Trotting and Pacing

The difference between a trotter and a pacer lies in the movement. The trot is a progressive motion of a quadruped, in which each diagonal pair of legs is alternately lifted, thrust forward, and placed upon the ground with approximate synchrony, the body of the animal being entirely unsupported twice during each stride. The pace is a swaying gait characterized by the throwing of the weight of the body from the legs on one side to those on the other.

Akron, O., boasts a schoolboy police of 350 members which has a record of not having had a fatal traffic accident to a school child in four years.

General, Oct. 12 (AP).—An official of the League of Nations said today Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York state, was being considered for the post of high commissioner of Jewish refugees.

The office of high commissioner of Jewish Refugees was voted by the League of Nations Assembly which concluded its fourteenth meeting yesterday.

The post is intended to place one man in charge of the problem created by dislodgement of Jews from countries where they have been denied citizenship privileges.

The subject, which formed the main object of discussion for the Assembly, was concerned mainly with the situation created in Germany where Chancellor Hitler's administration passed decrees aimed at Jews who moved into Germany after the World War.

Germany voted in favor of the resolution proposing the creation of a post of high commissioner but succeeded in adding to the resolution the specification that the League's only function in the matter would be the appointment of a commissioner and that thereafter the office would be run quite independently of the League.

ACCORD AND KERHONKSON COMMITTEES HOLD MEETING

John A. Hathamaker was elected as a new member of the Accord committee.

The committees agreed to cooperate with the county poultry and dairy programs. Two local poultry meetings were arranged for and an effort will be made to secure two or three demonstration dairy herds on disease control. Final plans were made for the personal canvass for Farm Bureau members which starts on October 25.

Los Angeles, Oct. 12 (AP).—The colorful and daring career of Tom Bay, who as a film stunt man had "doubled" for many of Hollywood's western stars in breath-taking episodes, was ended last night by a bullet wound.

The asserted slayer, Mrs. Alta Lessert, 34, was in the prison ward of the general hospital today, suffering from two self-inflicted bullet wounds. She was expected to recover.

Police reported the shooting followed a quarrel between Bay and Mrs. Lessert, both of whom resided in the same house. Another woman, whose name was not revealed by police, was present when the shots were fired and was reported to have been the target of one shot. She was uninjured.

Bay 35, had been a film stunt man for several years. In 1925 he was tried for the fatal shooting of James (Yakima Jim) Anson, another film cowboy, but was acquitted by a jury on testimony that the shot was fired during a struggle with Anson over a pistol.

Refinance Program to Retire Liberty Bonds

Washington, Oct. 12 (AP).—Treasury financing on a $2,000,000,000 scale today was the administration program for raising ready cash and refunding $1,875,000,000 of the fourth Liberty Loan issue.

A new issue of the 12-year bonds, paying 4 1/2 per cent the first year and 3 1/2 thereafter, provided the means of accomplishing the two double purpose of the operation.

The exact amount of the issue was undetermined, but $500,000,000 worth will be sold for cash at 101 1/2. Subscriptions open Monday.

Other portions of the bonds will be exchanged for fourth Liberty Bonds, which aggregate $6,268,094,150 and bear 4 1/2 per cent interest. Treasury officials expected only holders of the $1,875,000,000 called bonds to take advantage of the exchange.

Secretary Woodin said the $500,000,000 sale would provide cash for current needs, and the refunding would "affect a material reduction in the annual interest charge on the public debt."

New Men's Store Makes Alterations

The new men's haberdashery store of Tweedie-McAndrew on Fair street is undergoing extensive alterations and repairs at the present time for the express purpose of enlargement. After being open but a short time, the management of the store realized that the store space was inadequate for the proper display of merchandise. It was essential to rip out the back partitions in order to give this needed floor space, and carpenters have been busy since Monday hurrying the job to completion.

When completed, the store's length will be increased about 15 feet, and the fitting room and office will be on the right side of the store instead of the back.

Talks to parents

Taxi-Mothers

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH
The mother of mothers wasp and had their days as taxi-drivers in the home, and watching the roads crowded with their taking children to and from school, scout meetings, movies and parties, one wonders if they have time for anything else.

Perhaps many of them have some time to spare. There is a very large proportion of these taxi-mothers who are very busy in the home on their time, and energy, which they can devote to the care of their children and to the home.

It is useless to say that our parents do not do this. In their day, communities were arranged so as to keep the child's objectives within walking distance, and even for the time the roads were safe. Nor did children before the day of mothers dream of the possibility of going to so many places even had the places existed for them to go to.

There are two possible suggestions which must be made in such a situation. For one thing, there are buses in existence for a large part of the country to use. Maybe the time is half a mile away. For most children, for all except the smallest, that half mile walk would be a good thing.

Another possibility is cultivating a community spirit among mothers. Five or even six mothers might easily combine forces and each one reduce her quota to a trip a day.

A little thought and planning on the part of mother and children might further prove that many of the places the children want to go are not necessary. Fewer shows and entertainments would not hurt most of them, and perhaps if they once settled down to developing some kind of interest at home they would eventually prefer home life to so much gadding.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—Those who have contended that the NRA is a one-man organization and that the one man is Hugh Johnson have found strong evidence to support their claim.

It did seem reasonable when a slight illness forced the general to leave his office that nearly everything at N.R.A. headquarters came to a virtual standstill—that the entire machinery slowed almost to halting.

Marking Time

THE code for the drug industry was held up. Final action on the retail code awaited his return. The coal codes affecting Alabama and western Kentucky were at a standstill as were the plans for general reorganization of the NRA.

The weakness of the recovery organization quickly came to light. There was no assistant administrator. Since Dudley Cates resigned a few weeks ago no one seemed to have authority to act in Johnson's absence.

When the general returned he acted quickly to remedy the situation. He moved R. W. Lea, a long-time associate, into the vacancy created by Cates' resignation, and gave him the title of assistant administrator.

That, it is hoped, will prevent any such tie-up in the future.

Job's Affliction
INCIDENTALLY, there is an amusing story connected with the general's illness. It concerns the way in which his habitual friskiness with newspapermen assigned to "cover" NRA fooled them completely.

Johnson's ailment was nothing more than a very painful cold. He went quietly to the army's hospital here to have it treated.

When his absence from N.R.A. headquarters was noted, questions as to the reason were answered with the simple statement that, "He's got a cold."

The general was in the hospital from Thursday until the following Tuesday before newspapermen learned of his whereabouts. Frankness plus the rigid secrecy which surrounds the army hospital in the capital fooled them all.

Heard in Passing

SENATOR Logan of Kentucky, who chastised the ladies of Louisiana recently for their attitude toward the senate investigation committee looking into the activities of Huey Long and warned them they might incur the contempt of the senate, teaches a Sunday school class in the capital during senate sessions. The senator also once amazed his colleagues with the statement on the floor that "I didn't want to come to the senate in the first place, and now that I am here I am not so sure that I care about staying."

Some folks like mustard in their mayonnaise, but some can't stand mustard at all. Some find freshly squeezed lemon juice better for the family than vinegar. Fresh-made, fresh-served home made mayonnaise is just about the most delicious dressing there is. And you know that your own home made mayonnaise is made of the finest things... made the way your family like it best and the way it is best for them.

HERE'S THE NEW MIXER THAT WHIPS IT UP IN 1 1/2 MINUTES! PERFECT MAYONNAISE EVERY TIME!

THE NEW TURKEY

Woman Nomad of Southern Anatolia.

Described by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—W. H. D. Service.

TURKEY, the former "sick man" of Europe, has taken a new lease on life in Asia. There on the bleak, windswept Anatolian plateau, the erstwhile Ottoman empire has set about the task of building up a new state and a new social order, looking to the West for a pattern.

Progress is slow in some phases of its development, for the Anatolian peasant is fundamentally a conservative of conservatives and has proved acquiescent rather than enthusiastic in accepting reforms. However, more change probably has come into his life during the last decade than in any century that has gone before.

He no longer owes allegiance to a sultan of the house of Osman, but serves the Turkish republic. By government order he doesn't wear a fez any more. Not that there was anything economically unsound about a fez, but because the leaders who organized its departure were keen psychologists, and realized that their countrymen could not compete as well with representatives of the Western world while they wore a headgear that set them off as distinctly different.

In accord with another official proclamation, a Latin alphabet has replaced the beautiful but cumbersome Arabic script. Every one set about learning this new method of written expression. Only a very small percentage of the population could read or write the difficult Arabic characters, and even these found the alphabet a handicap in commercial dealings with foreigners.

When the Turkish republic came into being, in 1923, it took over an empty treasury. Turkey is not lacking in natural resources, however. Copper, silver, zinc, chrome ore, manganese, meerschaum, borax, emery, some coal, and a little iron make up its mineral treasure chest. There are also approximately 21,000,000 acres of timberland and a considerable amount of unharvested water power.

Only about 2 per cent of the population is engaged in manufacturing. Perhaps the most important articles produced are carpets, the weaving and coloring of which require some degree of skill. Fig-packing, plants, ginneries, textile and sugar mills also assume prominent places in the nation's rather meager industrial life.

Anatolia Mostly Agricultural.

A vast majority of the people of Anatolia have always derived a living from the soil or from their flocks, but the methods used are only just beginning to develop past the primitive.

Many peasants still break the ground for planting with flint-tipped wooden plows drawn by oxen or buffalo or, perhaps, if there are no animals available, by daughter or wife. However, steel plows are beginning to make their appearance here and there, and near the coast cities tractors are coming into use.

Eleven years of almost constant warfare immediately preceded the establishment of the republic and culminated in a decisive victory over the Greeks at the Sakarya river, in August, 1921, and a heroic defense of the medieval citadel of Gallatop, near the Syrian frontier. This period of conflict left Turkey sadly depleted of farm animals, seeds and agricultural implements, as well as able-bodied manpower.

But these Anatolian peasants are a tenacious race and, at the disbanding of the armies, back to their despoiled farms they went—those who were physically able—and, with such equipment as could be scraped together, began again to cultivate the soil.

There was no money for farm machinery. Grain was thrashed by the primitive method of rolling it out under a heavy log set with sharp stones, and was converted into flour between two heavy stones manipulated by the women of the farm household. Now the new government is operating agricultural schools which teach the advantages that accrue from the use of modern farm machinery.

Among the more important crops raised are cereals, figs, olives, fruits for drying, tobacco and cotton. Smyrna figs and Samsun tobacco have long been famous in the markets of the world, and of recent years cotton from the region about Adana has begun to attract international attention.

There are about 12,000,000 sheep in Turkey and nearly as many goats. The former yield a rather coarse wool which is admirably suited to carpet manufacture. The hair of the goats, many of which are of the Angora variety, supplies the material for the manufacture of mohair.

Savage dogs, their throats protected from wolves by heavy spiked collars, guard the flocks, and some shepherds would almost rather lose a child than one of these watchdogs.

Women Are Conservative.

Although official freedom has come to the Anatolian peasant women, they have not experienced practical emancipation to the same degree as their city sisters. They cling to their veils, resent the government liquor stores, are shocked by the semi-nudities of the new periodicals, see in the motor car a terror to their beasts, and dread the railways, for whose coming the men are eager. They do much of the hard work about the farms, and in addition spin out the wool which their sheep give, and weave it to make clothes for all the family.

The Ottoman Turks first appeared in their present homeland early in the Thirteenth century, when a few thousand of them, driven from Central Asia by Mongol invasion, settled near the present Ankara. Sixty-eight years later the Osman dynasty established itself and eventually conquered a large territory extending into Europe and Africa, as well as Asia.

Through the succeeding centuries unsuccessful wars followed the earlier victorious campaigns, with the result that the far-flung empire was reduced to the limits of the present republic. But in some respects the shrinking process was a disguised blessing, for it eliminated many of Turkey's polygot racial problems.

There are still within the country minority groups of Circassians, Armenians, Arabs, Kurds and Turkomans; but, with the possible exception of the Kurds, who are fairly numerous and intensely nationalistic, these people do not present grave difficulties. The Turkomans, who live near the western borders, are a nomadic people and subsist almost entirely on their flocks.

Ten years ago there were approximately 3,000,000 Greeks living in Anatolia and eastern Thrace, but those who survived the war of 1919-22 were removed to Greece in exchange for about 500,000 Turks living there.

Turkey's only large city is Istanbul (Constantinople), and since it has been shorn of its importance as the seat of government, many of its palaces are empty and in disrepair, and the bazaars, while still wonderful, have not the variety of attractions for which they once were noted. The only feature which has not changed is the matchless beauty of the Golden Horn and the Bosphorus, as their blue waters reflect mosque and minaret and crumbling fortress tower.

Ankara Full of Energy.

Ankara, awkward adolescent, throbs with energy. Call the new Turkish capital Angora and you relate it to Angora cats and Angora goats. Call it Ankara, as the Turks do, and its name suggests the anchor, paradoxical emblem of an inland city, which marked its ancient coasts.

Between the railway and the city, what was a malarial swamp has become a sports field, resort of fashion. On the main street, up which big buses climb to a shoulder of Citadel hill, are crowded schools. Near the Museum, happily conceived and magnificently placed, is an equestrian statue of the first and present president of the republic, Mustafa Kemal Pasha, confidently scanning the West.

Anatolia still colors the life of its capital. Bright-shirted peasants throng the market place. Flocks of turkeys wander about, fattening themselves for sale. Carts with solid wooden wheels and drawn by sluggish water buffaloes poke solemn fun at the speed-suggestive red helmet and arm band of an ultra-modern traffic policeman.

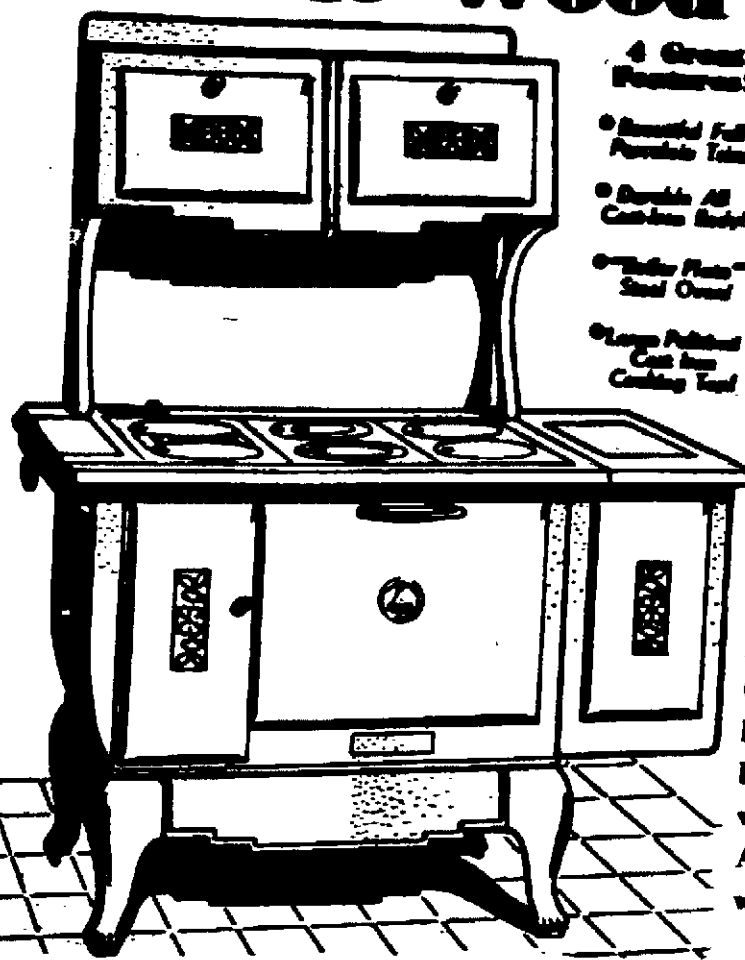

Izmir (Smyrna), Adana, Konya and Bursa are other important cities. The last named is a veritable dream city, charmingly located on the gorge-gashed lap of the Mysian Olympus, not far inland from the Sea of Marmara.

Many elements in Bursa life make it a potential center of difficulties in the new Turkish republic. It owed much of the prosperity that made it a beautiful city to Greeks, Armenians and Protestant Christians who were engaged there in silk manufacture before the World war. One of the republic's largest cities, and long a capital and cultural center under the Osman dynasty, Bursa has at times felt slighted by the republican regime.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

ROMANCE AND QUEEN MARY

WHY does Queen Mary wear those frightfully outmoded hats? You may be one of the many who have asked that question about England's queen. Or you may be one who assumed that she is simply old-fashioned.

No. Queen Mary may be old-fashioned in other ways. But that is not the reason she wears old-fashioned hats that sit up high on top of her head on which her hair is massed, also in an old-fashioned way.

We have the real reason, in the story of her life as told by Miss Hilda Grenier, who was for years "Royal Dresser to Queen Mary."

And the reason lies with King George. It is simply that he likes the queen in those hats. "I like," says the king, "to see my wife's hair."

And so though she prefers soft hats with brims, and we are told, looks lovely in them, the queen continues to wear the stiff little headgear that sits up high and shows her hair.

The moment you hear that, what happens to your preconceived notion of Queen Mary? The dignified figure of Britain's empress gives place to a woman who after so many years of marriage still dresses to please her husband—a romantic figure.

Romance is something we may not, in the past, have associated with Queen Mary. But now that we know that she wears those funny little hats just because her husband likes them, nothing can shake off the aura of it.

High Falls Church Had Anniversary

St. John's Episcopal Church of High Falls, celebrating its 50th anniversary Sunday, October 8, had a special service in the afternoon at 4 o'clock for which the edifice was beautifully decorated with flowers donated by Mrs. Harry Weber of High Falls and Mrs. Silas Niles of the same village. On each side of the altar were bouquets of dahlias, the kind that has won many prizes for Mrs. Niles at flower shows.

The church was filled to capacity and many who desired to attend the services could not get inside. The procession was formed outside led by the organist, dressed in white, followed by the acolytes and choir. Then came the clergy, the Rev. A. E. Bowler, chaplain to the Sisters of St. Anne, Kingston, the Rev. W. J. Gratton of Rosendale, the Rev. Frederick Wieland, the Rev. S. Glover Dunneath of West Park, the Rev. A. A. Packard, Jr. of Kingston, the Rev. John Marshall Chew of Newburgh, and the Rev. A. E. Marlier, priest in charge of St. John's Church.

The choir entered the church singing the stirring hymn, "Ancient of Days." The Rev. Father Marlier conducted the service, the Rev. Father Packard, Jr. read the psalm, "How amiable are Thy dwellings," and the Rev. Father Dunneath read the lessons. The Rev. Father Chew of Newburgh represented the Right Rev. William T. Manning, bishop of New York, and the Right Rev. Charles K. Gilbert, bishop coadjutor, and brought the bishop's blessing to the congregation. The preacher also praised the work of those who were responsible for the founding of the church, and also commemorated the splendid work done by the Rev. W. J. Clarke Agnew, who was the rector of St. John's for well nigh 40 years, and giving credit also to his immediate successors, especially the Rev. Father Dunneath, who until a short time ago was in charge of the parish. He also commended the work done by the members of the parish in the past, and urged them to continue their good work, and placed special emphasis on the missionary duty of the church.

The choir sang very well, especially the beautiful anthem, "Praise the Lord," by Ira B. Wilson.

After evensong was over tea was served by the St. John's Parish Guild. The hall was beautifully decorated by Myriads of flowers from the gardens of the parishioners.

All in all, it was a grand occasion, and the celebration will not be soon forgotten by those who were there.

Reservoir Country Twenty Years Ago

Shokan, Oct. 12.—Following the closing of the hole in the main dam of the Ashokan Reservoir, September 3, 1913, the water in the west basin kept accumulating until on the 10th of October it was 155 feet deep at the base of the dam and covered an immense acreage in the heart of the town of Olive including much of the most fertile land in that township. As there remained considerable clearing work to be done in the upper end of the basin, together with a great deal of construction work on the dividing weir and dykes, it became necessary at this stage of the filling up process to divert the water into the long channel that had been dug in the floor of the basin between Winchell's Hill and the Shokan-Brown Station highway. The water thus found its way to the gatehouse below the dam by way of the Esopus Creek below the dam by way of the waste channel, or old spillway, and the rocky bed of the brook which ran through the woods a short distance south of the village and the contractor's camp. Here, along the road, was formed a falls and rapids similar, on a much smaller scale, to the present spillway in time of flood, at Boiceville.

Monday, October 6, Shokan and the reservoir country had a distinguished visitor in the person of Mayor George H. McGowan, a New York city engineer who had been engaged on the waterworks construction job in that section for six years. The new M. E. Church in the present village of West Hurley was then being built, and Levi H. Dumond and John H. Saxe, now sheriff, had started a general store near the re-located railroad station. Charles Van Steenburgh, an old resident of the village, was preparing to remove to Kingston, as many others within the taking of the reservoir had done. After about a dozen houses in the old village had been razed, the residents of West Hurley, who had been ordered to vacate, were granted an extension of time by the city. October 11 was a gala day in the Brown Station sector, for years the center of construction activities, the occasion being an inspection of the works by a party consisting of B. W. S. officials and nearly 500 employees and invited guests.

Following an inspection of the great system of dams and dykes there was a banquet and speeches at the main offices. The visitors made the trip to Brown Station by train. The west basin lake was quite a sheet of water 20 years ago, though insignificant of course in comparison with the one of today. The low places along the creek up as far as the Shokan Bridge were covered as was the Isaac Merrihew property in Olive City. Mr. Merrihew, town clerk of Olive for a number of years, was a grandfather of the Merrihew brothers of Pine Hill bus fame and of Mrs. Arthur Hicks of Kingston. An engine tragedy took place on the 23rd when a horse belonging to the late Harvey Nichols of Broadhead ran into the new reservoir near Haver's deep hole and was drowned.

At Olive, or Ashokan as the village was soon to be called, John Davis and Christopher Louth were digging a cellar for George Lasher, a well known butcher who planned to erect a market and residence near the new railroad station. Mr. Louth and Mr. Lasher have since died. Mr. Davis resides at Ashokan. William and Albert Davis were having a bowling alley and hall built in the rear of their store. The entire building later burned to the ground in an early morning fire. Albert Davis, then postmaster, is dead. His son, William, is a farmer at Tongore.

Joseph M. Fowler in presenting the complaint, stated that the railroad then had only two stations as against six before the line was relocated. H. H. Flemming, for the U. & D., said that the stations at Ashokan and Cold Brook would be sufficient. A small shack was erected at Sand Hill but there has been no regular station built either there or at Boiceville.

Residents of West Hurley were saddened, on the 15th, by news of the death of Everett Scudder, a New York city engineer who had been engaged on the waterworks construction job in that section for six years. The new M. E. Church in the present village of West Hurley was then being built, and Levi H. Dumond and John H. Saxe, now sheriff, had started a general store near the re-located railroad station. Charles Van Steenburgh, an old resident of the village, was preparing to remove to Kingston, as many others within the taking of the reservoir had done. build there, much to the regret of their numerous friends in the reservoir country. Other realty changes involved transfers from Abner D. Winne and others to Jervis and Bertha Bell, who now live in Kingston, and from Hiram Barton, Jr., and wife of Olive Bridge to Benjamin L. Hoyer of High Falls. Mr. Hoyer ran a general store at Olive Bridge for several years but more recently has been engaged in farming near Arden Hill. At Boiceville, Mrs. Sarah Feeny, mother of Burton and Harry Feeny of Boiceville, and Mrs. Fred Brooks of Phoenixia, conveyed a parcel of land to Oscar W. Valet of New York city. The Olive political campaign was warming up, with Jacob V. Merrihew and Henry L. Winchell heading the Democratic and Republican tickets, respectively. A majority of the nominees of 20 years ago are still living, those now deceased including John G. Eckert, Albert Davis, Cyrus Cudney and Harry Keator. On the 25th there was an heagra of local Republicans to Kingston to hear District Attorney Charles S. Whitman hold forth in Association Hall.

Vital Statistics
Among the deaths in October was that of Eliza Windram, mother of William Windram of Kingston and the late George and David Windram of Shokan. Mrs. Windram, widow of John Windram, lived opposite the present place of Frank Myers, the site of her old homestead being within the city's preserve. At the Acorn Hill Wesleyan M. E. Chapel, on Friday, October 10, the Rev. G. N. Wyles united in marriage Stanley Krum of Krumville and Miss MacFarlinger of Palenotown. The newlyweds began housekeeping in the Stephen Owens house at Krumville. On the 15th, the wedding took place of Aaron Mackey of Krumville to Miss Bertha Roosa of Allgerville. The ceremony was performed at noon at the parsonage of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church by Dr. C. A. Holla, pastor of the church. The bride and groom returned home Sunday night, the 19th, and were given a skimmington on Tuesday night. Mr. Mackey, a member of the local department of Water Supply force at Brown Station, and Mrs. Mackey have resided in Shokan for the past several years.

The Back Brook section of Boiceville was the scene of a lively social affair on Saturday night, October 13, the occasion being a big dance at Frank Stevens' new barn. Over 100 couples made their way up the mountain to the Stevens farm which is now the property of Frank Barringer and is occupied by Mr. Barringer's son-in-law, Grant Every, and family. Over at Krumville, on the 28th, a surprise party was given Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Donohue, the occasion being Mr. Donohue's birthday. A chicken supper was a feature of this pleasant social evening. There was also a party at Frank Overacker's on the night of the 11th. Those who follow the current trend of ex prices may be interested to learn that 20 years ago Chester Lyons, present supervisor of Olive, shipped a crate of eggs to New York City and got 43 cents a dozen for them. Mr. Lyons at that time was a rising young poultryman residing in the southwestern part of the town. So much, then, for news of the reservoir country 20 years ago, when the big pond had reached a length and breadth sufficient to attract wild ducks and geese, the birds stopping here in their flight to rest and to try and figure out how it was that they had missed this likely body of water in the course of previous migrations.

A marker honoring William E. Livingston for his part in developing pure blood livestock breeding, has been erected by the Michigan Swine Breeders' Association at Palenotown, Mich.

Commission Hears Testimony.
Although the completion of the re-located line of the Ulster & Delaware R. R. early in the summer (11 miles of track were laid on higher ground in a few months' time) had proved a great boon to the people of Olive and northern Hurley, there was a considerable dissatisfaction manifested by residents of two or three sections who thought that the new stations were too far apart. Many persons were of the opinion that passenger and freight accommodations should be provided at Sand Hill, between the Ashokan and Cold Brook stops, and this agitation finally resulted in a hearing by the Public Service Commission in Albany on the matter of erecting an additional depot for the convenience of people living near the north shore of the west basin. Those who testified at this meeting as to the necessity of another railroad station were Supervisor Jacob V. Merrihew of Olive; William Longyear, a hardware salesman of Kingston whose summer home overlooked the west basin; Ogden Dunnagan, a farmer residing on the hill road to Boiceville, and John D. Ennst, whose farm lay along the north side of the boulevard. Of these gentlemen, Messrs. Merrihew and Longyear are Kingston residents, while the last two are de-

Circulation is a medical discovery with twofold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membrane and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs, circulations is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for pulmonary troubles. Circulation contains menthol which soothes and other home remedies which soothe and heal the inflamed membrane and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the circulations goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble. Circulation is a guaranteed satisfactory treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Circulation.

Seriously Hurt in Fall from Trestle

James Harrington, 23, of 19 Lincoln avenue, Danbury, Conn., was seriously injured shortly after 10 o'clock Wednesday evening when he fell from a West Shore railroad trestle about a mile north of the Port Ewen railroad station. He fell a distance of about 50 feet. He was injured about the back and legs and sustained possible internal injuries.

Harrington managed to climb up the embankment onto the railroad tracks after his fall and was seen by three negro lobbers, who when they found he was badly hurt hurried to the nearest house and telephoned to the Kingston and Cornwall W. Norman Conner sent his ambulance to the scene.

The ambulance went over the Round Creek Bridge and down into South Rondout. In order to get the injured man into the ambulance it was necessary to carry him about a half mile down the tracks and another half mile through the woods. The ambulance then conveyed him to the Kingston Hospital where he is under the care of Dr. Myers. X-ray pictures will be taken today to determine the extent of his injuries.

The trestle from which he fell crosses a road in the town of Esopus. Harrington said he had been out of work for over a year and was walking from the Port Ewen station to Kingston on the railroad tracks when he slipped and fell off the trestle. He had planned when he reached Kingston to take a train back to Danbury.

Versions on "When in Rome"

Like most such sayings, its origin is not really known. But it is often credited as the advice of St. Ambrose to St. Augustine. The latter was in the habit of dining on Saturday as on Sunday, but at Rome they had begun to fast on Saturday, and Augustine, puzzled by the difference in practice, appealed to St. Ambrose, the bishop of Milan. His counsel was: "When I am at Rome I fast as the Romans do; when I am at Milan I do not fast. So likewise you, whatever church you come to, observe the custom of the place. If you would neither give offense to others nor take offense from them."

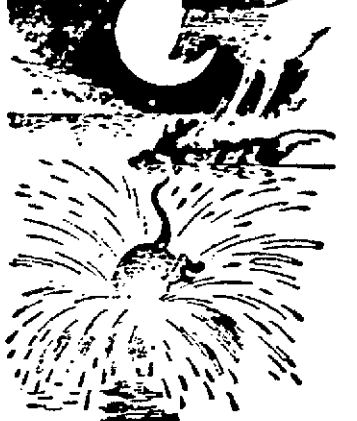

Other versions of his advice are given, and the same idea is found in other places, as in Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy: "When they are at Rome they do there as they see done."

"Little Stories for Bedtime" by Thornton W. Burgess

OLD MAN COYOTE'S MOUTH WATERS

SPLASH into the Smiling Pool fell Jerry Muskrat, and if ever there was a thankful Muskrat in all the Great West that one was Jerry. He didn't mind his own coat at all. Indeed, he was thankful that it had torn. If it had not he would now be on his way to the mouth of Hooley the Owl. Despite his fear and the smart of the wounds made by Hooley's claws, Jerry couldn't help a feeble grin as he heard Hooley's scream of rage and disappointment.

Now, of all that had happened to Jerry Muskrat, there had been a witness. A witness, you know, is one who sees what is going on. Jerry Muskrat didn't know that any one had seen what had happened to him. Hooley the Owl didn't know it. But all the time a pair of the keenest eyes on all the Green Meadows or in all the Green Forest had been watching. They were the eyes of Old Man Coyote.

There is very little goes on that Old Man Coyote doesn't know about. He had discovered what Jerry Muskrat was about, and more than one night he had been craftily stretched out back of the bulrushes at a place where he hoped Jerry would come for roots and climb out on the foundation walls of his new house and had watched him fall a-dreaming. He had even thought of trying to wade out and surprise Jerry, but had been too shrewd to try it. He knew he couldn't possibly do it without frightening Jerry.

Then he had seen Hooley the Owl drift like a shadow out across the Smiling Pool right over Jerry and clutch at him with great cruel claws.

His crafty eyes snapped as he saw that Hooley had Jerry only by his coat and that he didn't have a good hold at that.

"He won't fly far that way," thought Old Man Coyote. "He'll come down to the ground to get a better hold just as soon as he is across the Smiling Pool, and when he does Old Man Coyote is going to be right there. It is very fortunate that I am on this side of the Smiling Pool instead of on the other. Hooley is going to pass right straight over me and he is flying so low that I believe if I jump suddenly I can snatch Jerry Muskrat right out of his claws."

A fierce yellow light leaped up in the eyes of Old Man Coyote, and his mouth began to water. He crouched very flat and very still on the bank of the Smiling Pool and watched Hooley the Owl draw nearer and nearer with helpless Jerry hanging from his claws. There wasn't a shadow of a doubt in the mind of Old Man Coyote that in one little minute more he would have a muskrat dinner.

And then, right then, when he was so absolutely sure, he saw Hooley lose his grip with one foot and Jerry began to struggle. It was on the tip of Old Man Coyote's tongue to cry "Hang on to him, Hooley! Hang on to him just a minute longer!" But, of course, he didn't do anything like that. Instead he held his breath and quivered all over and his mouth watered more than ever. It was plain to see that Hooley wasn't going to be able to hold on to Jerry Muskrat long, and if only he would drop him on dry land Old Man Coyote would ask no more.

And then right at the very edge of the Smiling Pool Jerry tore loose and fell. He was so near that Old Man Coyote could almost touch him by reaching out. Had the water been shallow there this story never would have been written. But it was deep. It was so deep that Old Man Coyote had to stay on the bank. Splash fell Jerry right in front of him, and as he leaped over the bank ready to grab Jerry if he came up the water was actually dashed in his face. But Jerry didn't come up. He dived deep down and swam to one of his private little tunnels in the bank and crept up this to the safety of a snug little room where there was soft grass.

And so Jerry never knew how near he came to falling from trouble into worse trouble, nor how Old Man Coyote's mouth had watered in vain, and two people instead of one had been disappointed in a dinner they had counted as already as good as theirs.

Howe About:

Waterloo A Fairly Good Man Smoking

By ED HOWE

THE statement is often made that the late World War was the most violent economic disturbance of all time, the only other comparable with it being that waged by Napoleon Bonaparte against England.

I do not believe either war originated in economics, except in the general sense that every quarrel in human life is based on the effort of individuals to take advantage of each other. The World War was precipitated by a fanatical German leader who enjoyed displays of soldiering; by subjects too easily submitting when called upon to become soldiers. The wars of Napoleon were brought about by a leader who was not brilliant as a chess player, or in business, but who could beat everybody in the massacres, destructions and displays of battles. As a general he was as brilliant as Byron, who wrote one morning and found himself famous because of his victories in poetry and love. But both men finally stumbled; geniuses must as carefully keep common sense in mind as common men.

The other morning a tough looking citizen rang my bell, and I went grumbling downstairs to answer it. I have lately been expecting bandits, and, at first sight, thought this caller might be one, but he turned out to be all right. "Mister," he said, "for a dollar I'll clean out your guttering. Every so often it needs it, to prevent rust." . . . I answered: "All right, go ahead. And I thank you for calling attention to my neglect. Also, I commend you for hustling to get work, instead of going on the county or conscription. If you'll come back after the leaves have fallen, I'll give you another job. I rather like you; there are so many crying loafers now, a fairly good man attracts my admiration."

I lately encountered this sentence in reading: "A man never really enjoys smoking until he begins to believe it is harmful to him." . . . I am an inveterate smoker, but have never enjoyed smoking, although constantly angry at myself because I use tobacco, and only continue it because it is a habit extremely difficult to get rid of.

In spite of the horrors of war, or of an election, one always carries along a number of small things to excite and interest him.

I am just now in the midst of a marrying row between two people I have become acquainted with in Florida. The husband knew the wife was telling me her side of the story, and one day called to tell him, as I had long known them both. I told him of her charge that he had struck her as hard as he could.

"Did she show any marks to prove it?" he asked.

I replied she did not; in fact, that I had said to her she was probably exaggerating (as plaintiffs usually do) in saying this stout man had struck her as hard as he could.

"I slapped her," he replied, "and she kicked me on the shin. Look here; I can substantiate my side of the story."

Pulling up his pants, he showed on his right shin a very distinct black-and-blue spot. Then we both laughed, and he went away, after I had advised him to make his side of the pending divorce suit as respectable as possible; that this would be expected of him by all his acquaintances.

I had previously advised the wife to adopt the same course, and so advise you.

Whatever your row, whether it concerns marrying, business, politics or religion, make your side as decent as possible.

In reading I only occasionally encounter a sentence that interests, amuses or instructs me. One writer who was lately wandering around in fancy encountered a prophet and said to him:

"What is your specialty?"

"I'm looking for an argument," was the reply. "There is no reform I wish to accomplish; let others take care of themselves, a necessity with which I have always been confronted. I wish to argue, and stir up excitement to amuse my leisure. State your favorite proposition, and I will oppose it. I enjoy arguing, and, from long practice, am good at it. If I am able to sufficiently insult you, probably we can involve others in our contention, and start a war."

A man I know is going to the devil. Since he has apparently determined on this course I am rather pleased that he is going rapidly, that we may the sooner be rid of him. I have done what I could to help this man, but my efforts have only made him worse. So I rather rejoice to hear he is lately setting a pace in devilry that will soon dispose of him.

It may be conceit of mine, but I believe I can usually tell when a warning of wolves actually means wolves. Still, I have lost some sheep that might have been saved.

Moral: Better overdo caution than carelessness.

A little improvement in anything is all that can be reasonably expected. Do not expect too much, and insure discouragement.

THE HEART OF A BUTTERFLY

The butterfly plays as he works
His rainbow wings gather sun shines
As he dips nectar from the flowers
Sweet pansy, rose and columbine
'Tis he sees his home? This garden

Little Of This And A Little Of That

Democracy Learning No Stone Unturned to Beat Their Ticket This Fall Born as Organizing a New Party Known as the Taxpayers Workers.

"Well," remarked C. T. Taxes as he halted T. K. Payer on the street this morning, "I see the political pot is beginning to boil."

"Yes," replied Mr. Payer, "the Democrats have even organized a new party to be known as the Taxpayers Workers."

"That's an appropriate name for the Democrats to select," replied Mr. Taxes with a smile, "for there is no question but they have been working the taxpayers and the workers also the past two years."

"What I am wondering," continued Mr. Payer, "is just how many actual taxpayers signed that petition for the new party."

"That's what a lot of others are wondering too," replied Mr. Taxes, "and it strikes me queer why it was filed by Peter Fisher, secretary of the unemployed workers of the city."

"That's easy to answer," replied Mr. Payer, "you know there was some talk of getting Palmer Canfield, attorney for the association, to run on an independent ticket, but he turned it down but came out flat-footed, favoring the election of Mr. Flanagan."

"I thought Mr. Canfield was a Republican," said Mr. Taxes.

"He was elected mayor for four terms on the Republican ticket," replied Mr. Payer.

"Well even if he did turn down an independent nomination," said Mr. Taxes, "we now have an independent party in the field."

"Yes," but it's independent in name only," replied Mr. Payer smiling.

"But I still can't get the idea of it," confessed Mr. Taxes.

"Oh it's just to get a few stray votes for the Democratic ticket," explained Mr. Payer. "You know you can fool some of the people some of the time."

"But not all of the people all of the time," replied Mr. Taxes, finishing the quotation.

Sisters Use Snake
for Fishing Line

Bedding, Calif. — Angling for trout, Mrs. Melba Kahl and her sister, Beryl Quirk, pulled in five nice ones from Duncan creek near here. They wanted a snail, so a party of three could have two apiece for supper.

It was nearing midnight and their lack appeared to have run out until they saw a giant snake basking with an 8-inch trout in the water. The snake had the fish by the head so the young women, unafraid of the harmless snake, pulled the reptile out by the tail and brought the fish with it.

EYES OF PICTURE
LURE TO KILLER

Quits Hiding to See Portrait Arrested.

Berlin.—The fascinating smile and lovely eyes of La Janna, the beautiful new German film star, which have captured thousands of film fans in Germany, have, according to the Polish police, brought about the capture of the Vampire Man, the human fiend, who has killed three Polish girls and attacked and wounded eleven others.

The man is alleged to have made a complete confession of his guilt. He is stated to be Thaddeus Einstein, a twenty-seven-year-old cobbler.

While an army of police and 200 police dogs have searched forests for the last ten days, Einstein was living in the garret of a little house in the town of Wloclawek.

In full view of the garret window was a cinema and it began showing a film portrait of La Janna.

A portrait head of the beautiful girl flashed her smile right into the garret.

At four o'clock in the afternoon Einstein raced across the road and stood staring at the portrait. And at that moment Wataha Slatk, one of the girls who had been attacked but who escaped, passed by the cinema.

She saw Einstein and informed the police, who found Einstein still gazing at the film star's portrait.

A short struggle and he was overpowered. In the police station four of the wounded girls identified him as the assailant.

And then, according to the Polish police report, Einstein admitted that within three weeks he had killed three girls and had attacked at least eleven others.

Spain's Richest Man Is Held in Jail as Briber

Madrid.—The richest man in the peninsula, Don Juan March Ordinas, recently completed one year in jail. He has been held without trial.

All of his millions could not keep him out of prison; neither could his parliamentary immunity, for the Cortes voted to suspend it. March is a deputy from the Balearic Isles.

The two ministers of finance which the republic has had—Indalecio Prieto and Jaime Carner—described March as an arch enemy of the republic.

The charges against him are that he bribed the then dictator, Gen. Primo de Rivera, to obtain the Moroccan tobacco monopoly in 1926. Pleas of his lawyers and physicians for his release on bail, or to serve his arrest at home, have proved unavailing.

Counsel insists that the charges against him are unjust, declaring that it is well known that he gave donations to the then Queen Victoria Eugenia for the construction of a sanatorium in Majorca, and made other donations and a "loan" to a Madrid military newspaper at the indication of Primo de Rivera, but that none of this constituted a bribe.

Pickpockets Show Police
Chief They Know Trade

Turlock, Calif. — The joke was on Police Chief E. W. Gaddy, but now he's convinced that pickpockets piled their trade during a recent carnival here.

After receiving many complaints of pocket thefts Chief Gaddy visited the carnival with a bulky wallet in one pocket in which he placed a note reading: "Did you ever get fooled?" After an hour the chief returned to his office with the wallet still in his pocket, but on opening it he found a different note saying: "Quit your kidding." It was not signed.

Hoboing Pullet Takes Long Trip on Bumper

Hagerstown, Md.—When Alvey C. Zittle left in his auto from near his home near Boonsboro he did not know that he had another passenger.

He did not discover that one of his half-grown pullets had perched upon the bumper until he reached Shepherdstown, 22 miles away.

How the chicken clung to the bumper and came through unscratched is a mystery Zittle is trying to solve.

Helpful Stranger

Troy, N. Y.—"Here, give it to me," volunteered a stranger when the bartender couldn't change the $10 bill offered by Henry Brookes to a beer garden here. He walked outside, calling: "Wait until I come back." Henry is still waiting.

Dante, the Italian Poet,
Was Native of Florence

Dante, the celebrated Italian poet, was born in Florence in the latter part of May, 1265; the date is uncertain. His family was an old one, his father an adherent of the Guelph party in the long feud with the Ghibellines.

"At nine Dante first saw Beatrice Portinari, then only eight. The "Vita Nuova" is practically a history of his love for her. She enters also into the Divine comedy. In 1285 she was married, but not to Dante, who expressed no disappointment at her marriage. She died soon afterward, at the age of twenty-four. Dante himself married about two years later.

He became passionately absorbed in the love of country, and at the age of twenty-four fought on the side of the Guelphs at the battle of Campaldino. He was intrusted with several foreign missions and became an important factor in the Florentine government. Time modified his ardent partisanship, and he was occupied with plans for the reconciliation of the Guelphs and Ghibellines. In 1303 he abandoned his public career and spent the remainder of his life in wandering from one city to another and in study. He died at Ravenna September 14, 1321.

America B. C.

Whether the first human creatures roamed the wilds of Africa 20,000,000 years ago or whether man first appeared in the Gobi desert or some other region remains a puzzle on which geologists never cease to ponder, remarks the New York Sun. The controversy on man's first home does not overshadow in interest a report on ancient American culture presented by a representative of the American Museum of Natural History. Digging in their native soil, anthropologists of the United States turn up some of the most fascinating puzzles known to students of prehistoric man. When a quarry near Folsom, N. M., was examined the remains of extinct buffalo were found. Mounds in Kentucky have yielded skeletons and the remains of ancient dwellings believed to mark the site of a town which thrived in the South in 1008 B. C.

Dyson Thinks Jackets Will Show Up Better Against Lucky Strikes

Manager Ken Dyson of the Yellow Jackets talked about his team today in a vein indicating he thinks the Jackets, who lost last week to Fordham A. A. 14-6, will fare much better in their game Sunday at the Fair Grounds against the Albany Lucky Strikes.

"I think we'll show up much better against the Albany team than we did in our first game of the season last Sunday," said Dyson. "The boys are out to win and promise those who come out to see them a whole lot of a game. They are in better condition physically now and ready to stand up against hard play."

"Regarding the sort of attack to be used against the Strikes, Coach Watts Wheeler hopes to see the Jackets put into effect an aerial game that will carry them on to victory."

"Practice will be held tonight at 7 o'clock in back of the Kingston Auditorium on Broadway and Wheeler will be there to direct the passing drill."

"Last fall we defeated the Lucky Strikes 18-6. Sunday's engagement should be a tougher one for the Jackets than the one they captured, as the Albany team has been strengthened a lot, I understand. The lineup of the capital eleven, announced to me is:

Ends—Rutnick 32, Joyce 33, Rushmen 24; tackles—Joyce 27, Webster 2, Horne 49, Ruhland 38; guards—Van Valkenburg 26, Thuroff 25, Gelsel 31, Gaucant, Lewis; center—Reilly 36; backs—Daley 22, Meyers 28, Reilly 13, Knapp 20, Ruckly 31, Schmidbauer 34, Quillon 29.

Dyson said he was not prepared to announce the Yellow Jacket lineup yet, but stated several new faces will be recognized in the battle formation of the club Sunday. Al Flanagan, formerly with the Wasps, will be back in the lineup, also Eric Winkly if present arrangements are completed.

Starting time of the game is 2:30 and expectations are that there will be a large turnout of fans on hand to witness it.

On October 22 the Jackets will play at Sing Sing prison.

Deschutes river in Oregon would not be very popular with women. It abounds with fish, but its banks are populated by snakes. Fishermen wear the trousers legs that much resemble the deschutes in order to protect themselves while fishing.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Pepper Martin won't be back in the world series picture for at least another year, but the erstwhile "Wild Horse of the Osage" has given the baseball experts plenty to chatter about around the old hot stove league by converting himself in one season from a sweet center-fielder into one of the best third basemen in either major league.

The votes still show a majority for Pie Traynor in the All-American baseball balloting for 1933, but the eminent Pittsburgh third-sacker, considered in a class by himself for so many years, has a challenger at least in the irrepressible Oklahomaan. In fact there are a number of shrewd observers who think Pepper has passed Pie in all-around baseball ability, including the art of guarding the old hot corner of the diamond. He is faster now and covers more ground than Traynor.

Martin has satisfied them all now that he possesses ball-playing greatness. The "ball of fire" of the 1931 world series took about a year to recover from the re-action and hard-luck that followed his exploits against Mack; Grove, Cochrane, et al., but he was a sensation again this year and very likely will be the All-American third baseman by the close of 1934.

Dutra Gets Going

"Senior Olin Dutra, deposed national P. G. A. champion, didn't do so well in the national pro classic this year, but when he got home he opened his fall campaign by snagging the Southern California P. G. A. title for the fourth straight year," writes Frank Finch from Santa Monica, Cal.

Dutra was four strokes behind the leader, Willie Hunter, former British amateur king, with only 36 holes to go in the pro medal play event, but the big Brentwood blaster shot 72-67—139 on the final 36 holes to win by a margin of two strokes.

"This victory has given the man from Monterey renewed confidence and now he is pointing for the big winter tournaments slated for the coast."

Safeguarding Athletes

To further safeguard the average school or college athlete, especially against the hazards of the football fields, a timely and useful "handbook on the prevention and cure of athletic injuries" has been put out by the National Collegiate Athletic Association under the direction of a committee headed by Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft of Princeton. It covers every essential from training methods to first-aid treatment of injuries on the spot.

The handbook is couched in simple terms and published in handy form at a nominal cost of only 15 cents per copy, obtainable through Dr. Raycroft at Princeton. "So far as we know," writes Dr. Raycroft, "this is the first attempt to make available in handy form for wide distribution a medical and training program based upon many years of experience in competitive athletics which may be of use to doctors, coaches and trainers in schools and colleges, who are responsible for athletic teams."

Dr. Edgar Faurer of Wesleyan University and Dr. Augustus Thorndike of Harvard University were associated with Dr. Raycroft in the preparation of the handbook.

WRESTLING LAST NIGHT.

(By The Associated Press)

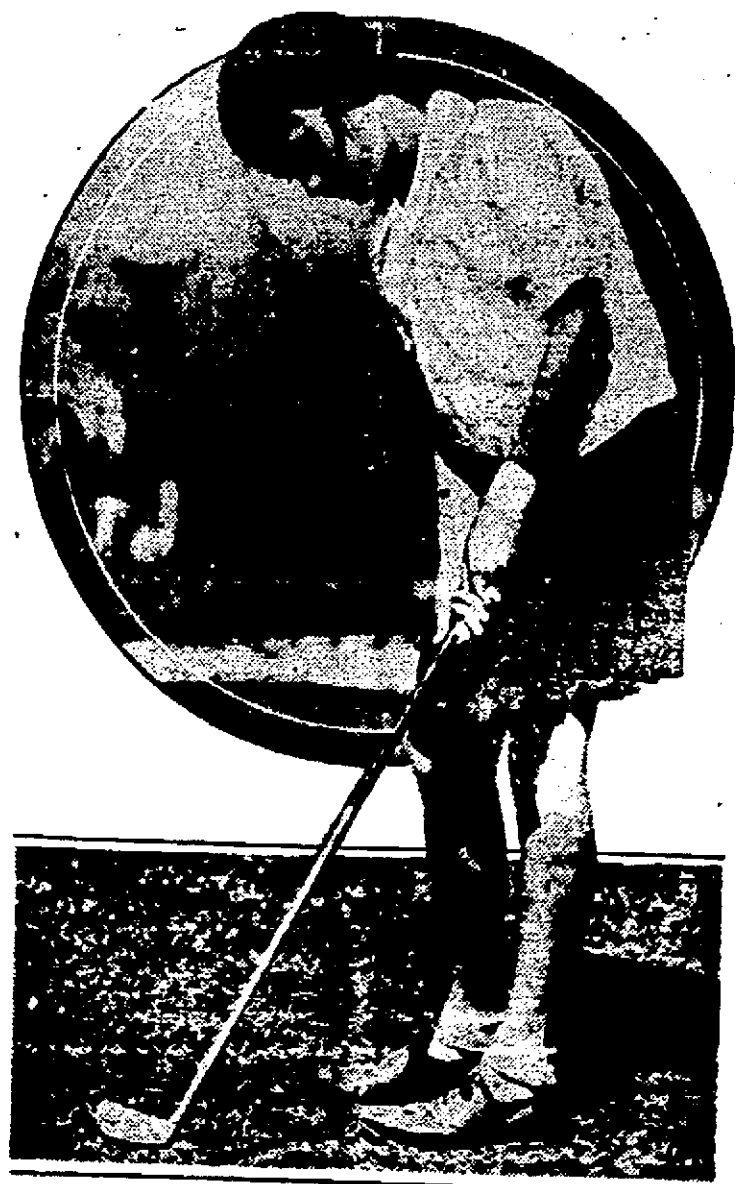

New York—Jim McMillen, 225, Chicago, and Fred Grubmeyer, 203, Iowa, drew (bust stopped by eleven o'clock curfew).

Cleveland—Leo Numa, Seattle, won over Jack Washburn, Chicago, 24:15 (Washburn disqualified).

Here's an intimate shot of Kenneth Duck Rasmussen, official "entertainer" for the Ohio State eleven, getting the boys in shape for a tough battle this week-end.

Girl, 13, Defeats Veteran To Win Georgia Golf Title

DOROTHY KIRBY

Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta school girl, weighs less than 100 pounds and doesn't hit a golf ball very far, but she hits them on the nose. She defeated a field of veteran stars in winning the state crown, whaling up with a victory over a former southern champion.

PUNTS and PASSES

(By The Associated Press)

Philadelphia—If Glenn "Pop" Warner suffers a touch of homesickness when his Temple Owls meet the Haskell Indians tomorrow night, few of the fans will be surprised. Haskell is coached by "Lone Star" Dietz, one of Warner's pupils at the old Carlisle Indian School and tomorrow's game marks the first time since "Pop" left Carlisle that he has encountered an Indian team.

Canton, N. Y.—Football practice at St. Lawrence doesn't end when the sun goes down. All the members of the team live in the same dormitory and when they're all ready for bed Coach Tom Sullivan routes them out for a half hour of running through plays in the building's gymnasium from 10 to 10:30 p. m.

Philadelphia—Young Jonah McCracken, who was promoted to be varsity quarterback at Pennsylvania yesterday, has taken a roundabout route into American football. McCracken comes from Shanghai, China, and learned the game there, but his training came from his father, who was a star guard at Penn some years ago.

Hamilton, N. Y.—The Colgate football squad has one interested spectator when it goes through its complicated passing maneuvers. He is President George Barton Cutten, who played center for Yale in 1898 and who pointed out to Coach Andy Kerr some of the possibilities of lateral passing.

New York—Manhattan College offers a "twelve threat" backfield instead of the usual "triple threat" back. Bill Pendergast, Larry Spellman, Ed Bankowski and Red Welch, the four regular backs, all can run, pass, and kick capably.

Washington, D. C.—The Georgetown team this year doesn't look like the best of the hoya teams, but it appears to take the prize for youth. Leo Curley, son of Boston's mayor and a reserve tackle, and Paul Kennedy, who may be on the regular quarterback, are only 18 years old.

British Postage Stamps

British postage stamps have never borne the name of Great Britain, but only the legend Postage and Revenue and, with very few exceptions, the profile of the reigning monarch. Some stamps are more curious in that there is no indication on them of their value. An example of this was the newspaper stamp issued by Australia, 1863, which bore neither the name of the country nor the value. The design was a head of the Greek god Hermes, enclosed in a fancy border.

A machine to wash fruit and eggs, operated in Portland, Ore., has a capacity of 4,000 boxes of apples daily.

Michigan's Clash With Cornell the Highlight On Football Schedule

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—Except perhaps for the Stanford-Northwestern battle at Chicago, the clash between Cornell and Michigan in the first big East-West game of the year takes the intersectional prize on this week's football program.

This game, besides renewing an ancient rivalry, brings out two contrasting styles of football for what may be a conclusive test. Michigan has had remarkable success in recent years with its famous "punch and prayer" system of putting up a strong defense and looking to the breaks for chances to score. Cornell's fame was built on Coach Gil Dobie's off tackle smash, which won just about as much renown as the game taught by Harry Kipke.

The big Red team from Ithaca hasn't been successful as Michigan in the past few years but despite the handicaps of limited practice and material, Cornell football has been on the up grade and this year's team has shown considerable promise in its early games. Likewise the Dobie attack has been modernized, still along conservative lines, until it should give the Michigan defense a stiff test.

The East has its star struggle in the Pitt-Navy clash at Pittsburgh, which overshadows even such good early season games as West Virginia-Fordham, Ohio Wesleyan-Syracuse, Washington and Lee-Yale, Bucknell-Villanova and Rutgers-Colgate. The Pitt Panthers, rated as one of the best two or three teams in the section last year, have made another good start with victories over Washington and Jefferson and West Virginia. The Midshipmen look somewhat better than they did last season, having downed William and Mary and Mercer decisively.

Where Coconut Is King

To the average American, a coconut is only a coconut, providing an occasional delicacy, to be eaten either raw or in a cake, pie or candy. But there are parts of the world where the coconut tree is the producer of almost all the necessities of life, says Field Museum News. Staple food, drink, clothing, shelter and shelter are garnered from this unprepossessing fruit of the South Seas, and the islanders of those regions are perfectly happy with a mean of coconut, coconut and coconut, three times daily. Children of the tropics eat a strange candy made from part of the sprouted coconut which bulges into the center of the fruit and absorbs the meat and milk. This is a tender tidbit. Aside from its local uses in the tropics, the coconut is of great importance in the world's commerce as a source of copra, the dried coconut meat from which coconut oil is obtained for edible fat, and for use in soap making.

Sheep were herded through the main streets of Salt Lake City as part of a program to stimulate the consumption of lamb.

Billiard Table Said to Have Come From Spain

The billiard table is said to have found its way into America through the Spaniards about 1570. The English style of table and game was first adopted by Americans. Tables 6 by 12 feet, with six pockets, were used. Soon the tables were reduced in size from 6 by 12 feet to 5½ by 11 feet, then to about 5 feet wide to 30 feet long. All matches and tournament games are now played on tables 5 by 12 feet, which are popular in public rooms and clubs throughout the United States, while tables 4½ by 9 feet are used almost exclusively in private homes. Pool is played on a table 9 by 10 feet or 4½ by 9 feet with six pockets, generally with a gully attached. The English billiard table consists of a framework of mahogany or other hardwood, with six legs, and strong enough to bear the weight of the slabs of slate each 2 2/3 feet by 6 feet 1½ inches and about 2 inches thick. These having been fitted together to form a level surface, and a green cloth having been tightly strained over it, the cushions are attached, and the pockets, for which provision has been made in the slate, are adjusted. As the inside cushion is not perpendicular to the bed of the table, but is beveled away so that the top overhangs the base by about ¼ of an inch, the playing area of the table is 6 feet wide, but is 1½ inches short of 12 feet long. The height is 2 feet 8 inches measured from the floor to the cloth.

Many Odd Superstitions Concerning the Cuckoo

A great many superstitious beliefs and legends concerning the cuckoo have been handed down from early times, observes a writer in the Detroit News. According to one old Irish superstition, an unmarried person should search the ground at his or her for a hair on first hearing the song of the cuckoo. The hair, when found, should reveal the color of the hair the person is going to marry.

A more widespread custom is that of turning over the money in one's pocket on hearing the cuckoo sing for the first time. This is supposed to insure an increase in one's wealth. Perhaps one of the oddest ideas concerning the cuckoo is one that is mentioned in the works of Aristotle. According to this authority, there were in his time persons that believed the cuckoo was changed into a sparrow hawk in winter because the hawk was variably disappeared when the sparrow came and vice versa.

Smokers say:

"IT'S EVEN BETTER THAN ITS GUARANTEE"

When we reduced Bayak "Phillies" in price—from 10c to 5c—we guaranteed that it was the same fine cigar as when it was the most popular 10c value in America. We meant—and still mean—just that!

Smokers now tell us that Bayak "Phillies" is an even better cigar than we guaranteed. Men who can well afford to pay double or triple the price, say that no cigar—regardless of price—gives them the complete pleasure and satisfaction they get from Bayak "Phillies"—at 5c.

We do know that Bayak "Phillies" is the cigar that most smokers like best. Sales prove it. In 9 months—at 5c—it has become the largest-selling cigar in America, at any price.

When you try a Bayak "Phillies"—remember this. It is not a 5c cigar. It is a proven 10c cigar value now selling for 5c. This makes a vast difference in what you can expect. There's a fresh box on your dealer's counter.

Bayak's Guarantee

In 1929—a peak sales year—the Bayak Philadelphia Perfecto (famously known as "Philadelphia Hand-made") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America.

Bayak guarantees that this cigar today—at 5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Havana and Domestic long filler. It's the same identical cigar.

PLAY, FIDDLE, PLAY!

By Thayer Waldo

DI PRANO stood by the bed, gazing down at the old face upon the pillows.

"Maestro," he said slowly, "you do not know what you are doing. This would rob your life of all joy."

A gentle smile played across the other's features, shadowy and waxen in the dim candlelight.

"Luigi, my friend," came the answer, "my life itself is not far from the finale. Too long have I struggled foolishly against oblivion. The name of Pietro Gitalpi is without meaning today, among this alien people. My great wish now is to spend the few years that are left me in peace and comfort at Milan. There is but one way to make that possible."

He paused.

Di Prano sank down upon the bed's edge, silent, and shortly the other continued:

"For twenty years, Luigi, I knew the joys of creation, of acclaim and reward. Kings heard my playing, the instruments I fashioned were sought by great artists, and pupils came to me from many cities. Now, all that is gone and forgotten. I am an old man and in need. Why should I complain if I must exchange one possession that is dear to me for ease and security in the evening of my days?"

Di Prano gestured helplessly.

"But it is so much more than that!" he cried, "this, that has been treasured through twelve generations in your family—with what can you hope to replace the happiness it has brought you?"

"I have considered that, too, my friend," replied Gitalpi calmly.

"Do not forget that these old hands once made violins as well. The finest of these I still have—the one which you called 'Il superbo'—fashioned after the Stradivarius."

The soft smile came again as he added:

"That shall comfort me, Luigi. Why, a new bridge and a string for it, and I shall never know I am not still fingering the other!"

Behind the old man's words Di Prano sensed the hidden anguish, the anticipation of great and irreparable loss.

He knew the other instrument, marvelous replica, though it was, could never replace the Stradivarius in Gitalpi's heart.

How gladly, he mused, would he give to this man, who had taught him knowledge and beauty and wisdom in music, twice the sum the violin would bring! And yet, how hopeless to offer any aid beyond the service now asked of him.

Abruptly he rose, paced the tiny room once, and halted again beside the bed.

"There is no alternative, then?" he asked.

"You are determined that I shall find a purchaser?"

Gitalpi moved a hand, blue as watered silk, in a slight gesture of deprecation.

"I do not wish to trouble you," he said; "if you should know of some one—"

Di Prano cut him off, expostulating.

"My dear Maestro! At least, please spare me that. To speak of troubles—"

A shrug of distaste completed the thought.

"There is a man of whom I know," he went on, "willing and able to pay well for such an instrument. But he is no musician—only a pretentious trickster, a fabulous-salaried soddier of clasp-trap tunes for the radio."

The old man winced visibly, then sighed a little.

"And you," he said, "might perhaps have spared me that. Although I may not choose, it would have been pleasant to fancy that some one worthy of—"

Again Di Prano broke in, now contrite.

"Forgive me," he cried.

"I should not have spoken, but I thought possibly to dissuade you at last. I see that I was both foolish and unkind. Forget what I have said. Perhaps, after all, I am only prejudiced."

Gitalpi was once more serene.

"It does not matter, my friend," he replied, "but tell me—when could you see this man?"

"I will go to him at once, tonight, at his studio," said the other.

"I cannot thank you properly," responded the maestro with quiet simplicity, and added, "You will find the violin upon the cabinet in the other room, where I keep all that is left me."

Bliss, Di Prano spoke gently: "Very well. Good night, old friend. I shall return in the morning."

The white hair waved upon the pillow as Gitalpi inclined his head without speaking.

Di Prano went out, closing the door.

Holding aside the black and silver draperies, the servant said: "Mister Moreno will see you now."

Di Prano tucked the violin case beneath an arm and went past him into the studio.

At its far end a young man in a blazer dressing gown turned from the windows and came forward, deliberately.

"You're Mister Di Prano, I believe," he said.

It was not a question. The tone was drawing with a fringe of insolence.

Di Prano bowed slightly.

"Yes," he replied.

"Signor Moreno, I have something which I believe will interest you."

The other took a cigarette from a pocket case, lit it, and dropped on a blue leather divan.

"Well, let's hear about it," he said finally; "but you can drop the 'Signor.' This isn't Italy; I'm an American."

Di Prano's smile was brief and bleak.

"As you wish," he replied.

Placing the case upon the floor beside a chair, he sat down.

"I have heard," he continued, "that you are interested in purchasing a Stradivarius violin."

Moreno regarded him through half-shut lids a moment, and answered: "Perhaps—it depends. If it was just a Strad I wanted, that's not hard to find. The one I buy's got to be good."

Di Prano fought for patience and an even tone.

"I understand that, of course," he said.

"This—" he motioned downward,—"happens to be such a one. It is owned by an old friend, my teacher and a countryman of—of mine. He is aged, in bitter poverty, and must part with it. I can assure you it is an exquisite instrument—no mere museum piece but a thing of glorious tone and perfect workmanship, one of the real gems."

The other waved a languid hand impatiently.

"Come, come, Di Prano," he objected, "I really don't need other men's opinions about a violin, you know. Let me see it and play it—I'll tell you whether it's grade A or not."

Wordlessly, Di Prano stooped for the case and handed it across.

Indifference in every movement, Moreno flipped open the lid and took out the instrument. And then all carelessness was suddenly gone from his manner.

His eyes gleamed as light struck softly from the smooth and mellow varnish; his fingers caressed the beautifully barred back, the scroll of delicate grace.

At last he took up the bow and rose, a new hint of vigor in his bearing. Swiftly he tuned; then, with a flourish, head tilted back, he ran through a florid measure of introduction and launched into Herbert's "Gypsy Love Song."

The man's playing teemed with the atrics—staccato, double stops, interpolated runs. Yet no misblending could mar those strains, incomparably rich and sweet. For five minutes Moreno subjected the instrument to every trick he knew, yet always that flood of pure melody poured forth unbroken.

The last faint whisper died away.

He put down the violin slowly and looked at Di Prano, striving for a casual expression.

"I'll buy it," he said, "if the price is right."

"Twelve thousand," was the answer.

The instinct to haggle rose in Moreno, sought utterance, and was submerged by his desire. He moved his shoulders and turned away toward a desk.

"I'll write you a check," he said.

"Thank you," Di Prano replied, adding, "To Pietro Gitalpi, please."

Moreno was playing again as Di Prano went toward the doorway—a timid, crooning tremolo of "Play, Fiddle, Play." He paused as the other turned back.

"You may not have noticed," said Di Prano, "but the bridge, the bridge and the E string will need replacing soon. The Maestro—Signor Gitalpi—intended to take care of that, but he—well, it won't be necessary now."

Mushroom City Residents

Have World of Their Own

The catacombs of Paris are really subterranean stone quarries, from which the famous Paris opera and many other public buildings obtained their building material. They belong to the state, and large areas are let to growers of the famous champignons de Paris, mushrooms much prized by French gourmets.

This underground city, says a writer in Tit-Bits Magazine, with streets as wide as those on the surface, and along which run laden lorries piled with this dainty, is the greatest mushroom-producing center in the world. Many miles of pipes are laid down for the watering of the mushroom beds.

The mushrooms are picked every morning at five o'clock, and packed into baskets and dispatched to every town in France. All the morning the streets of this underground city resound to the passing motor lorries—some of eighteen capacity—leaving for the Paris market. The city has a perfect system of ventilation operated by huge petrol-driven fans.

The inhabitants of the mushroom city live in eight miles of streets 100 feet below the surface.

Origin of Game of Golf

An authority says "It is scarcely to be doubted that the game of golf is of Dutch origin," deriving its name from the German "kolbe" or the Dutch "kolf," both meaning "a club." It was introduced into Scotland considerably before 1457, but as late as 1615 it is recorded that "a small quantity of gold and silver is transported stierly out of his Majesty's kingdom of Scotland" for golf balls made in Holland.

"Grange" Means a Barn

The French word "grange" means a barn. It is from the Latin "granum," grain. There are several old meanings of the word which contribute to its modern sense. It meant a granary; an isolated farm; a farm proper belonging to monasteries (the rent of which was paid in grain), and a country seat.
